In 1990, journalist John Feffer interviewed several hundred activists, scholars and politicians in East-Central Europe. In 2012-13, he conducted follow-up interviews to assess the economic and political transformation of the region. This lecture, based on his recent book Aftershock: A Journey into Eastern Europe’s Broken Dreams, explores the rise and fall of Liberalism in the former Soviet bloc and globally.

Hungarian writer and human rights advocate Miklos Haraszti calls Aftershock “both a merciless political history and a compassionate political psychology of central and eastern Europe’s post-Cold War transformation.”

Presented by John Feffer
Director of Foreign Policy in Focus at the Institute for Policy Studies.
Tuesday, March 20th
4:00-5:00pm in GA 1067